MOKENA PTA IS SPONSORING BIG ATTRACTION

After careful deliberation and investigation, the Parent Teachers Ass'n., have secured the attraction known as the Consolidated Players for this special performance at the Mokena High School for one complete performance on the night of January 26. Two hours of high class entertainment consisting of mirth melody, mystery and music, goes to make this entertainment an outstanding show of the season. This performance given for the purpose of raising funds for a radio at the school.

In this excellent performance are featured some of America's foremost entertainers, namely, Bert Bacon, "The Alabama Boy", in banjo philosophy, negro songs and dialect stories. Mr. Bacon has long trod the boards of the American stage and is classed among the foremost in his line. Next to mention is Bess Woods, "Radio Song Bird" Those who are fans of the radio and have listened in nightly, will at once recognize this personage of radio-land and instead of tuning in every Wednesday night, will have a chance to see and hear her in person. Do you recall her character songs and lullabies that have won the way to your heart nightly? She has chosen a select program from her many requests which have come to her in her fan mail daily for this special performance.

Now a trip to Magic Land with Leland. Many surprises of the art from Hindustan to your own back door. This clever artist entertains and surprises you with his many dexterous tricks of legerdemain. He wouldn't fool you for the world.

Billy Ireland, monologist and eccentric dancing entertainer has a novel offering. Billy has in the past been associated with some of the foremost Musical Comedies and will select from his program, hits and bits from here and there. Another treat is a musical cocktail by George Wagner, the original "Melody Boy". And by no means a stranger to radio fans

To the ladies, a paramount offering, Madam Florine, "A Mental Marvel" the lady with the EX-RAY eyes, a marvelous demonstration of the development of certain senses which enable her to perform feats while blinded, baffling to the constant observer.

The climax or feature of this attraction will furnish you with mirth to last a month. Harriot LaRue, supported by Arthur Keller, Leland Ains and the entire cast, in a screaming farce entitled, "You'll like the place", assures the people of Mokena and adjacent territory a production of unusual merit. This portion of the performance alone, is worth several times the price of admission. Tickets are now on sale by Parent-Teachers also at Mokena Hardware Store and a crowded house is already assured.

Former Mokena Man

Dies In Plainfield

John Sonntag, well known to the older residents of Mokena, died last Wednesday night in his home in the village of Plainfield where he had been a resident for 61 years. Mr. Sonntag was 81 years old at the time of his death.

Mr. Sonntag was born in Sherron, Pa., and came with his parents to Homer, township when a boy. As a youth he learned the harness trade in Mokena, later moving to Plainfield where with his brother, Albert he conducted a business under the name of Sonntag Brothers.

He was regarded as the oldest merchant in Plainfield, having been in business for 60 years. He was active in social and political circles, besides serving as mayor, he was village and school trustee for many years.

Mr. Sonntag was a member of Plainfield lodge A. F. & A. M., No. 536 and served as treasurer of that organization for 18 consecutive years. He also was a member of Joliet chapter R. A. M., No. 27, and Pansy chapter O. E. S., No. 236 of which he was past worthy patron.

He was married in 1876 to Mary Brennan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Brennan of Mokena.

Surviving are the widow, three sons, Milton of Plainfield, John of Joliet, and Joseph of Los Angeles, California; two daughters, Mrs. Daisy Taylor of Plainfield and Mabel of Hammond, Ind., and two brothers, Albert of Plainfield and Chas. of Joliet. Six grand children also survive.

Funeral services were held Saturday at 2 p. m., at the Plainfield M. E. Church with the Rev. Thomas Charters and the Rev. Frank Hopkins officiating. Burial was in the Plainfield cemetery.

Echoes from The Past

The following Mokena news appeared in the Mokena column in the Joliet News under date of Jan. 23, 1900:

Quite a number from this place attended the funeral at Joliet last Sunday of a son of Mr. and Mrs. Eichholzer who died at the early age of 20. Mrs. Eichholzer is a sister of Mrs. Cappel of this place.

The M. W. A., of this place will give a grand masquerade on Wednesday night, January 31. Russo's orchestra has been secured to furnish music for the dance, also a costume from Chicago will be present to furnish costumes. A good time is predicted to all those who attend.

The Court of Honor No. 991 of this place did itself proud Friday evening and we sure are that it was the verdict of all the 125 guests assembled that as an entertainer the sisters and brothers of the Court of Honor are No. 1. The splendid supper and entertainment was free and no pains were spared to make it an enjoyable affair. The evening's amusement was opened by the band who played a few selections. Prof. Desmond then entertained the audience for half an hour with a neat little speech and a snort lecture on Fraternity, which was loudly applauded. Supper was then served and after supper dancing was the main feature of the evening. The court here is in a very prosperous condition, numbering at present forty-six.

Miss Anna Volck who has been on the sick list with the mumps, has now recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Geddes of Chicago visited here over Sunday at the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Zarnitz.

Mokena Garden

Club Will Hold

Masquerade Ball

The Mokena Garden Club will hold another one of their popular masquerade dances at the St. Mary hall on Wolf road in Mokena on Saturday night, January 27th. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

All the proceeds derived from this dance will be used for civic work in Mokena.

Sacred Moving Picture "Christus" Coming to Mokena

A rare treat is in store for you and yours. The seven-reel motion picture "CHRISTUS", a complete Biblical account depicting the life of Christ will be presented at the Mokena High School Auditorium next Wednesday evening, Jan. 24th at 7:30 p. m. The spectacular and majestic scenes shown in this beautiful story of our Savior have been filmed in the Holy Land. They are considered the best ever shown to the public. Some of the outstanding scenes are: The Annunciation, Birth of Jesus, Wise Men from the East, Flight into Egypt, Slaughter of the innocent babes, The Childhood of Jesus, His Manhood, Baptism, Temptation, Miracles, The Last Supper, Gethsemane, Betrayal of Judas, Denial by Peter, Trials before Caiaphas and Herod and Pilate. The Scourging, Carrying the Cross, Crucifixion on Golgotha, Burial, Resurrection. Ascension.

There are scores of camels and hundreds of people in the picture and the solemnity of action makes the subject imposing, elaborate and interesting from the beginning to the end.

Don't miss seeing this beautiful sacred picture. Only a small admission fee will be charged. Buy your tickets in advance from members of the Lutheran Y. P. S., or at the ticket office at the auditorium.

To Hold Gospel Services at Tinley

In response to a popular demand for evening church services at Tinley Park, a movement has been begun to hold non-denominational and non-sectarian gospel meetings.

Commencing Sunday evening, January 21st at 7:30 p. m., Tinley Park Community Gospel Services will be held in the Tinley Park Community Hall.

The meetings are to be opened by thirty minutes or more of the singing of gospel songs, after which evangelistic messages are to be given. Special music and features will be heard each Sunday evening.

A most cordial welcome is extended to the general public to attend these gospel services.

Tinley Band to Hold Dance Feb. 3rd

Tinley Park band will sponsor a big dance at the Bachelor Grove ball room on Saturday night, Feb. 3rd. Everyone invited.

Tinley Park

Triangle Talkies

Hello Folks, Friday, Jan. 19. Another week of startling news, surprising gossip and more scandal. First, our hats off to the Tinley Park Volunteer Fire Department. Their annual masked ball Saturday night at Saenger Hall with Tom Owen's tantalizing WLS radio music presiding packed them into the hall. The masquerade was a huge success and a gala homecoming. We wish the fire men would entertain oftener and repeat with the famed WLS dinner bell music.

Orchids to the bold, courageous group of five Triangle members who masked and organized the Tinley Park Minute Men—junior fire dept. Brave Wally, modest Jack, Shy Al, Impertinent Mick and Captain Elmer garbed only in long underwear and boots, shocked the natives but responded as alert, split second firemen fastest on record. They rescued your correspondent in the grand march from an over heated wrangle with a certain blonde.

Three of our popular girls, Nellie Ann, Esther and Marian fainted Saturday night when they discovered their devoted ones wore long undies.

Mae West appeared in person and asked a certain tall and handsome person to come up and see her soon. Wait till Al reads this.

Adeline dug deep into the archives of the past and appeared in a Mid-Victorian costume to get a glimpse of a future destiny.

Earl Siemsen put on the Al Jolson act. Was you colored all over Earl? Alma, Bernice and Bernetta were stunning in their girlish costumes.

Rudie is very prompt with his dates. Better late than never says the old adage.

Wally? Minnie can't wait until the 9:30 train gets to Tinley Friday nights. So near and yet so far.

Already the wolves are snarling at Windy's door. A great coach must produce winning teams, so please Elmer work those heavies harder than ever for the rest of the season. Have you seen the coach in the new derby. "Dinner at Eight and serve champagne," says Elmer.

The girls and lightweights basketball teams defeated Evergreen Park and Midlothian over the week end season. The heavyweights dropped a Fletcher have only lost one game this season. The heavyweights dropped a one sided game to Evergreen Park.

ORLAND DROPS PWA GYM DUE TO EXPENSE

The gym or field house project which some of the Orland Park people had suggested as a PWA project has been abandoned. At a recent meeting of the Orland Park board a committee of fourteen members was appointed and they met in conjunction with the village board Friday night. George E. Gee of the Orland State Bank and a member of this committee pointed out that insofar as the government only contributed 30 per cent of the cost of PWA projects, the remaining 70 per cent has to be met by the municipalities seeking such PWA projects, it would mean that if Orland Park would go ahead with the gym project a bond issue would have to be floated. Mr. Gee pointed out that the present was a very inopportune time for bond issues when many property owners are unable to pay their taxes and interest on indebtedness. Other speakers expressed similar sentiments. The gym project was then dropped.

Next a suggestion was made that a new village well be drilled a new water tower and new village water works pump be considered as a PWA project, but no definite action was taken on this matter.

600 Attend Tinley Masquerade Ball

The annual prize masquerade given by the Tinley Park Volunteer Fire Department at the Saenger hall last Saturday drew a crowd of 600 people.

In addition to the cash prizes, the big feature of the evening was Tom Owens and his orchestra and entertainers from the WLS radio station. The old cow bell which radio listeners hear every Saturday in the national barn dance program was also in evidence. These entertainers and their orchestra made a big hit, in fact to such an extent that many of the dancers have beseeched the Fire Department to put on another dance after Easter.

Another feature was four couples all over sixty years old dancing a square dance.

The Tinley Park firemen wish to thank all the people who appreciate the firemen and who helped to make the fire department's masquerade such a big success. The firemen also wish to tell the public that the Tinley Park Fire Department is at the service of the public 24 hours a day.

Tom Owens of the WLS entertainers served as caller and everyone had a real wonderful time. All prizes awarded were in cash.

J. ROTHENBERG OF PALOS TWP. PASSES AWAY

John Rothenberg, aged 69 years, died Tuesday morning at 3:30 a. m., at his home in Palos township following a stroke.

He was born in Palos township on November 13, 1864. On March 13, 1912 he was united in marriage with Wilhelmine Brandt.

Surviving are the widow, two brothers, William and Edward, three sisters, Mrs. Louise Storz, Mrs. Minnie Schellhase, and Mrs. Anna Leckow.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the late home to the Christ Lutheran church in Orland Park with the Rev. A. Lach, officiating.

CWA Workers Can

Only Hold One Job

The past week foremen in charge of CWA workers in Frankfort have been notified and they in turn have notified the workers that no CWA worker is allowed to do any other work for pay beside the CWA work. It is understood that anyone violating this order will be removed from the CWA roll.

Talkie Movies at

Tinley Every Week

Tinley Park is enjoying talkie movies which are shown at the Saenger Hall every Wednesday evening. The first pictures were shown last Wednesday night. This week the second show was held and a show will be held every Wednesday night. Read the adv. on the back page of this issue for further particulars.

Some very good pictures have been shown.

Bremen Bank

Elects Officers

VEGETABLES AND LAMB

WE ARE not confined to the succulent green vegetables of the summer for the vitamin-rich foods which are needed in our diet, as the winter vegetables are full of these life-giving substances and canned foods contain them in varying amounts. When fresh tomatoes become too expensive, the canned tomatoes are always available. Besides these canned vegetables we have the cabbage, carrots, celery, cauliflower, onions, rutabagas. Milk, butter and eggs contain vitamins as do liver, kidney, cheese, citrus, fruits and lentils.

Kohlrabi and Carrots.
Take one cup each of diced kohlrabi and carrots, cook in separate saucepans in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and cook in two tablespoons of shortening until slightly browned. Melt two tablespoons of shortening, add two tablespoons of flour and mix well until smooth. Add one cupful of milk gradually, stirring until smooth. Add one beaten egg yolk, one tablespoon of minced parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Add the vegetables and serve hot.

Kidney Beans and Corn.
Mix two cups of canned kidney beans with one and one-half cups of corn, one tablespoon of minced green pepper, salt and pepper to season and one well beaten egg. Put into a well buttered baking dish, sprinkle the top with crumbs and grated cheese. Bake in a moderate oven half an hour.

Lamb Brochettes.
Have young mutton from the fore quarter cut into inch cubes. Put on to metal skewers alternating with pieces of salt pork cut half as thick. Sprinkle with seasoning, brush with melted fat, dip into crumbs and boil. Serve with chili sauce and green peppers, stuffed with seasoned rice.

Lamb or Mutton Sandwich.
Chop and leftover roast or cooked lamb and add to a dish of scrambled eggs. While hot place on buttered bread or toast and top with sliced fried tomato. Serve hot.

JERRY MUSKRAT TAKES A DAYLIGHT JOURNEY

Trust not a fox because he smiles
Least it shall prove one of his wiles.

SEATED on the Big Rock in the Smiling Pool as the Black Shadows were chased away by the Jolly Little Sunbeams and daylight took the place of darkness, Jerry Muskrat watched Reddy Fox trot off across the Green Meadows toward the Old Pasture. Reddy looked back just once and smiled. At least he meant to grin. What he really did do was to grin.

If Jerry had been near enough to see that grin clearly, he would have seen in it such slyness and eagerness as might have given him an uncomfortable feeling.

He was now almost on the edge of the Cornfield.

He was now almost on the edge of the Cornfield.

able feeling. As it was, that grin looked pleasant, which was what Reddy fully intended.

"It was wonderfully good of Reddy Fox to come away over here just to tell me about those carrots," thought Jerry, "and to invite me to go with him to get some. He must think a lot of me to go to all that trouble. He certainly must. He—"

Jerry stopped right there and suddenly sat up very straight while a funny look crossed his face. He pulled his whiskers thoughtfully, and the look on his face grew still funnier. "I wonder," said Jerry, very softly, talking to himself, "I wonder if he was thinking more of me or of himself. I wonder if it wasn't his own stomach and not my stomach that put the idea of carrots into his head. Nothing would give him more pleasure than to Little Redhead!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

LITTLE Redhead, did you run Laughing in the morning sun?
Did the red rays strike your hair,
Love its gloss, and linger there?
You are only two months old—
Two months drenched with living gold!
Did you pluck in Paradise
Those blue blossoms for your eyes?

Did a white dove flying near Touch your cheeks and find them dear,
Giving you the velvet white
Of its wings for our delight?
Did you meet on Heaven's strand
Angels? . . . Did they take your hand,
Filling it with glorious
Happiness to bring to us?

Little Redhead, did the dawn
Touch your hair and linger on?
Somewhere on your journeying
Redbirds met you, pretty thing!
If we had been asked to name
What we longed for, ere you came,
We'd have answered: Heaven's pearl
Is a red-haired baby girl!

show me the way—inside his stomach! Perhaps I'm not fair to you, Reddy Fox, but I can't afford to take any chances. I'm going to start for that garden of Farmer Brown's this very minute. It may be risky to do it in broad daylight, but I am afraid it would be a whole lot riskier to do it after dark with you, Mr. Fox. I certainly am. I wouldn't do it at all if it wasn't that it just seems as if I must have some of those carrots."

Jerry looked this way, and looked that way, and looked the other way, until he was quite sure that Redtail, the Hawk, was nowhere to be seen. Then Jerry dived into the Smiling Pool and swam quickly across it and up the Laughing Brook. At a certain place a little ditch came into it, a ditch which had been dug to drain off the water from the Green Meadows in the spring. The grass grew long on both sides and hung over the little ditch. Jerry turned into the little ditch, which was now quite dry, and ran along it, keeping as much under the grass as he could. It led straight in the direction of Farmer Brown's cornfield, on one side of which were rows and rows of delicious carrots, according to Reddy Fox.

It was a long way to the end of that ditch. Anyway, it was long to Jerry Muskrat, who does little traveling on land. It was a real journey for Jerry. When he reached the end of the ditch he came to another ditch going crosswise. He turned down this a little way and then very carefully climbed up the bank until he could peep over. He was now almost on the edge of the cornfield, the very side where Reddy had said the carrots were.

GRAPHIC GOLF

KEEPING THE CHIN BACK

ONE trouble with the advice "keep the chin back" is that many golfers who attempt to carry out this procedure to the letter find their whole swing tied up. Still it is one of the fundamentals of good golf and the average player should take measures to carry it out and still manage a free swing. Walter Hagen, above, portrays a good example of a golfer who can accomplish this and swing with no sign of tautness. It is just such an example as this that shows how Hagen really achieved his golfing greatness. Perhaps to more than anything else Hagen owes his success to his ability to relax in any and all conditions. In this case he is allowing the body to turn independently of the head, the head being held back as the anchor of the swing.

Not every one will find Hagen's ease in doing this but at least certain precautions will aid immeasurably. In the first place the golfer should concentrate more on the correct swing than on where the ball is likely to land, and then try to eliminate hurry in a relaxed, easy swing in which, as the above illustration typifies, the body moves independently of the head.

THE WEDDING MARCH MURDER

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, is obviously in a state of anxiety. Peter Cardigan, novelist, and amateur detective of some note, with Sergeant Kilday, of the New York police, begin the official investigation. The dagger used by the murderer is found. Franklin, while waiting, had many visitors, among them his mistress, an actress, "Choo Choo" Train; his intended wife's father, Ambrose Carmody; her brother, Rylie; Daniel Bullis, well-known politician, and an unknown woman in a blue frock, who had quarreled openly with Franklin. Rylie Carmody admits trying to stop the wedding, after being informed by Webster Spears that Franklin was still friendly with Choo Choo, despite his approaching marriage. Kilday secures the dead man's keys.

CHAPTER III

Callis Shipley's Story

Peter was not prepared for Callis Shipley's loveliness. He masked the intensity of his stare with an apparent interest in the room about him.

"You wanted to see me?" she was making an effort to be politely casual, but the novelist noted the tremor of her hand.

Sergeant Kilday waited for Peter to begin. For reasons of his own, he had suggested that the novelist ask the questions.

"Miss Shipley"—Peter was holding a chair for the girl—"did you wear a blue dress this afternoon?"

"Why, yes." Her surprise was evident.

"Of course you know"—Peter took a chair opposite her and leaned back, crossing his knees—"what happened?"

"Well, not exactly. It must have been something—something very serious, to have interrupted the wedding."

She was sitting very straight; her hands, resting on the arms of the chair, gripped them nervously. Peter found her exquisite, but in spite of his fascination, he was annoyed. His attention was wandering from the questions he must ask.

"Of course," he agreed, his voice still gravely quiet. "But has no one told you what happened?"

She hesitated. Only the whiteness of her knuckles, where she clutched the chair, betrayed her inner turmoil.

"No," she said distinctly. "No one has told me what happened."

The novelist changed his line of attack. "Who brought you home, Miss Shipley?"

For a moment, she did not answer. Then, "What have I to do with this, Mr. Cardigan?" she asked. "Why have you come here to question me? The butler said you were policemen."

"Sergeant Kilday is," Peter indicated his friend. "I am just a sort of ex-officio assistant." His brief smile warmed the lean irregularity of his features into friendliness. "There is no cause for alarm, I am sure. We have only come here because we are sure you can help us."

The rigidity of the girl's figure did not relax.

"Help you?" She waited expectantly.

Peter wondered whether that were a question or a challenge. "By telling us who brought you home," he said. She did not hesitate now. "My chauffeur."

"Oh! And you came straight home?"

"Yes."

"Without ever waiting to find out what had happened?" Peter's tone was slightly incredulous.

The girl shrugged. "There was nothing I could do," she explained. "Doris had left. Every one else was leaving."

"Didn't you even ask what was wrong? I should have thought you would be curious."

"I was. Of course I wanted to know. Every one did. But no one seemed to know."

"And the other members of the wedding party—where were they?"

"They—why, they just broke up with the crowd, I guess. I don't know."

"And so you came on home by yourself."

"With the chauffeur," she corrected him. "I have already told you that."

An unexpected bitterness surged up within Peter. Why should he be so unaccountably angry because she was deceiving him? He surveyed her gravely. "Do you mind if I speak to your chauffeur, Miss Shipley?" he asked.

"Rylie!" She bit her lip, and then continued more calmly. "What did Rylie tell you?"

"I would rather you told us, Miss Shipley." Cardigan sat down again. "Did you see Rylie this afternoon?"

"Yes. I saw him. I—I didn't tell you the truth. I asked Rylie to bring me home."

"Where did you meet Rylie? He wasn't in the church."

"When I came out, I saw him." Callis avoided Cardigan's eyes. Instead she seemed intent upon the handkerchief she was twisting between nervous fingers in her lap. "Somehow," she continued, "I had become separated from the rest of the wedding party. Outside I saw Rylie and asked him to take me home."

"What did he think of the wedding being postponed?" Peter's voice sounded only politely curious.

"He," the girl faltered, "why, he was stunned, just as I was, of course."

"But still neither of you knew what had happened?"

Callis shook her head.

"Then why didn't he go back to the vestry and find out? The bride was his sister. It would have been very simple."

"I guess we didn't think of that. We were excited. Every one was," the girl protested.

"I imagine you were," declared the novelist. "You were excited because you thought you already knew what had happened. And you were right, Miss Shipley. Jim Franklin was dead."

"Dead!" The girl whispered the word through stiffened lips. "Dead!"

The steel went out of Cardigan's eyes and his tone was gentler when he continued. "Didn't you know?"

Callis did not reply. Peter found himself regretting the beauty which held such a fascination for him. Confound "she couldn't have committed the murder. He thought of those blue bruises at either end of the wound which had ended Franklin's life. But, of course, there was Rylie Carmody. He had the strength. And the motive.

He had said he was going to stop the wedding. And it had been stopped. But what did this girl know about it? Why had she lied about that ride with Rylie Carmody? Why had she visited the sacristy? She—why, she was scarcely more than a child, he reflected bitterly. Of course, there were those keys. Could there have been anything between her and Jim Franklin—Jim who was notorious for his weakness where women were concerned? That was ridiculous, and yet she had been in the vestry. Could that have been the real motive for the murder? If Rylie Carmody loved this girl and discovered an illicit affair between her and Jim Franklin, he might be using Choo Choo Train as a pretext. That might explain this girl's evasions, and yet, as he glanced at her, so slender and erect, he found it hard to picture her in such a role. He glanced at Kilday, hunched forward in his chair, twisting an unlit cigar between his lips. The sergeant, he knew, would have no qualms where a pretty woman was concerned. He had, in his long career, arrested too many of them. Peter wished that he had left the questioning of this girl to him, even while he scoffed at himself for his too-ready sympathy. He turned again to the girl.

"You didn't suspect he was dead?" His voice was still gentle.

"No—I didn't know."

The answer was evasive, Peter thought, and the warmth faded from his eyes until their blue was the chilly color of bright steel.

"And why," he asked quickly, "did you run back to the sacristy just before the wedding, Miss Shipley?"

The girl hesitated, as though searching her mind for an answer.

When she did not reply, Peter added, "We know you were there. Mr. Royce saw you. You must remember that."

"Yes," hesitatingly. "I saw Mr. Royce. I asked him where Rylie was."

"Why were you looking for Rylie?"

"Because I was afraid," Callis replied suddenly. "I was afraid. I—I had to find him before the wedding."

She afraid? Or did she only want them to think she had been frightened. Peter had the feeling that the girl was acting a role. And yet he found himself wanting to believe her.

"You think a great deal of Rylie, don't you, Miss Shipley?" Once more his voice was unbelievably gentle.

"I love him," the girl answered simply.

"Then I think you can help him a great deal by telling us the whole truth," he urged. "Jim Franklin has been killed. Rylie had threatened to stop the wedding. It may help him; great deal if you will tell us all you know about it."

"But I don't know anything," the girl protested.

"You know that Rylie didn't like Franklin—that he was trying to keep his sister from marrying him, didn't you?"

"Yes, I know that. Rylie told me about another woman, an actress."

"When was that?"

"This afternoon."

"Before the wedding?"

"Yes. I had an engagement with Rylie. You see," the girl's manner was easier now, "the stockings which were sent to match my frock for this afternoon weren't quite the right shade and it was necessary for me to get others. Rylie was to bring me home, but phoned, saying that he couldn't. That was when he told me about this other woman. He wanted to see Jim Franklin."

"And did he see him?"

"He hadn't then."

"But that worried you, did it?"

The girl nodded.

"Why?" Kilday interrupted. Then, without giving the girl opportunity to reply, continued, "That was when he told you he was going to stop the wedding, wasn't it?"

The girl made no reply but the expression on her face was answer enough.

"Was that why you went to the sacristy just before the wedding, inquiring for Rylie?" Peter continued gravely.

"No." There was an almost imperceptible quiver in the girl's voice. "I mean—well, I went to the sacristy, all right, but not because of what Rylie had said."

"Then why did you go?"

"Because," Callis' eyes wavered from one man to the other, "because of something Web Spears said." She was leaning forward, her nervous fingers twisting the handkerchief in her lap ceaselessly.

"Web," she continued, "left the church just a few minutes before the wedding was to begin. The wedding party was gathered in the vestibule. I was standing by Doris, as he came out."

"Aren't you going to stay for the wedding, Web?" Doris asked him.

"No," he answered. And then he said, "Where's Rylie? If he were here there wouldn't be any wedding."

"That frightened me. I knew Rylie had been terribly angry at Jim Franklin, since he had learned about this actress. And I was worried because he wasn't in the church. So I ran around to the sacristy to see if he were there. He wasn't there."

"Later, after the announcement that the wedding was postponed, I met Rylie out in front, and he brought me home. I was frightened. I thought that he had had something to do with it. That's why Rylie didn't go back to see what had happened. He thought the wedding had gone on, in spite of everything he could do. You see, he had seen Jim Franklin, earlier, and then he went home, to try to stop Doris, before she left for the church."

"But he missed her at home, and when he returned, he heard the wedding march playing, inside, and thought he was too late. And I—when I saw him," the girl choked back the tears, "I jumped to the conclusion that he was responsible, and asked him to take me home. Later, as soon as Rylie understood what had happened, he hurried back to the church."

"This is the truth, Mr. Cardigan. You must believe me. I was frightened for Rylie. That's why I didn't tell the truth, at first. I didn't want you to know that I had suspected him of some part in this. Because he is innocent. You do believe me, don't you?"

Before Peter could reply, Sergeant Kilday interrupted. "This still doesn't explain how you knew there had been a murder, Miss Shipley."

"I didn't." The girl turned on him quickly. "I didn't. I was afraid something like that had happened, but I didn't know."

"And did you only go back to the sacristy once?" The sergeant chewed meditatively on his cold stogy.

"Yes, of course. Just once. I've told you about that."

Kilday rose abruptly. "Thank you, Miss Shipley," he said. "You've been of great help. I'll hurry along, Peter. Meet me at the car."

Peter knew what that meant. The sergeant wanted time to try Franklin's keys in the door while there was no one in the hall. His part was to detain the girl here a few seconds longer.

He found the task distasteful. Against his better judgment, Callis had almost convinced him of Rylie Carmody's innocence, even while admitting that she had suspected the youth herself. And she had lied to him, too, at first. Could he believe the second story she had told? With reluctant honesty, he knew that he wanted to believe her. He rose to leave. Kilday had had ample time to try the keys. Had one of them fitted?

He was detained by the girl's hand on his sleeve. "I've told you the truth," the girl declared. "Rylie couldn't have done it. He couldn't."

"For your sake, I hope he didn't," said Peter, in parting.

"How about the keys?" was the novelist's first question when he rejoined his friend at the curb.

"Nothing doing."

Peter was surprised at his own sense of relief, and yet, because he realized how the girl had appealed to his sympathies, he cautiously added, "Nevertheless, she was wearing a blue dress."

Lesson for January 21

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4:12-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Matthew 4:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Finds Some Helpers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Began His Work.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Begins His Life Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Threefold Ministry of Jesus.

Matthew's purpose was to present Jesus the Messiah as king. Strictly speaking his official ministry began at his baptism. So far as his preaching was concerned the present lesson is properly designated "Jesus Begins His Ministry."

1. The King His Own Herald (vv. 12-17).

1. The reason for this (v. 12). The news of the imprisonment of John the Baptist caused Jesus to forsake Judea and go into Galilee. The fate of John was accepted by Jesus as foreshadowing his own death. This was an act of prudence on his part. When the people reject the truth and attempt to do violence to the messenger, there should be a turning from them unless specifically directed otherwise.

2. To whom the proclamation was made (vv. 13-16). It was to the people at Capernaum in fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy (Isa. 9:1, 2). This is a section of the country most overrun by the warring nations and therefore most exposed to the blighting effects of war. Thus we see that the darkest and most corrupt of the provinces was first in getting the light.

In this we see a foreshadowing of the present age when the gospel of the grace of God is being preached to the Gentiles. It is just like Jesus our Lord to extend his grace to the lowest and most despised peoples. He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

3. His message (v. 17). "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." This is the same kingdom which John the Baptist and the Old Testament prophets proclaimed. It means the messianic earth rule of Jesus Christ. The time is coming when heralds will again announce the coming of the kingdom and the King himself will come forth from the heavens to establish his mediatorial kingdom. It is for this we pray when we intelligently say "Thy kingdom come."

II. The King Calling to Himself Assistants (vv. 18-22).

1. His command of authority (vv. 18, 19). He did not try to persuade them by the use of arguments but issued a mandate. To command is the prerogative of a king.

2. The station of the servants called (vv. 18, 21). They were men of lowly birth and occupation—fishermen. These men were busily engaged in service when the Lord issued the call.

3. To what they were called (v. 19). They were called to definite service. "I will make you fishers of men." He had previously called them to be disciples (John 1:36-42). He now called them to service. The qualities which made for good fishers of fish—patience, bravery to face the storm and the night, the perseverance which toiled all night though no fish were caught—would make them good fishers of men.

4. Their prompt obedience (vv. 20, 22). They put their trust in him who called, believing that he was able to supply their needs. When the king commands there is no time for delay.

III. The King's Triumphant Progress (vv. 23-25).

He went the whole rounds of Galilee teaching the Scriptures, preaching the gospel of the kingdom and healing all manner of diseases. He did a threefold work.

1. Teaching the Scriptures in the synagogues (v. 23). The revelation of God needed to be explained. This is what he was doing in Nazareth (Luke 4:16-22). Such is the primary business of every Sunday school teacher and minister.

2. Preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom (v. 23). The king who was then present and was heralding his own mission, was ready to establish his kingdom if they had been willing to receive him.

3. Healing all manner of diseases (vv. 23-25). There was no form of disease which he could not cure, and so abundant was his success that "his fame went throughout all Syria; and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them."

The Great Secret

To the man without faith the universe seems to be a gigantic, merciless, grinding machine, but to us who have learned the secret of the Lord it is our Father's House, in which not a sparrow falls to the ground without his notice.

Tracing World Civilization

Anthropologists Find Much of Which Present Age Can Boast Is Heritage From Old Peoples of Asia and the Nile Valley.

"The civilization of our ancestors borrowed from 1,500 years from civilizations influenced by Asia and the Nile Valley," Prof. Fay-Cooper Cole, professor of anthropology at the University of Chicago, said at a luncheon at the Chicago Woman's club. The meeting was sponsored by the inter-racial and international affairs committees of the club.

"All peoples of the world have many things in common, in primitive backgrounds, in cultural attainments and in superstitions as well," said Professor Cole.

"Every people is inclined to think its own ways superior to those of all other peoples. That applies to primitive peoples as well as to the others. Pagans of the Philippines call themselves by a name which means 'We are the people.' They regard the clothes and customs of other peoples as queer."

"The Romans put a stop to the head-hunting and human sacrifices of our ancestors in Britain."

"We are likely to think of superstition as belonging to primitive peoples. What about our own horseshoe, horse-chestnut and number thirteen? The horse-chestnut was carried to cure rheumatism or anything that ailed you."

"How many persons stop to think why we have ceremonies of cornerstone laying? It harks back to a time when in Great Britain and in northern and central Europe our ancestors killed a person and buried him—or buried him alive—in a box-like room at the corner of a building, that his spirit might guard it."

"We make offerings of flowers in respect to the dead. Our ancestors used to offer horses and food."

"It was not long ago that witches were executed in an American colony, as well as in Europe."

"Our ancestors borrowed customs for about 1,500 years, as the Japanese more recently have been borrowing from us. The Romans carried into northern Europe influences acquired through trade, war and religion, from the Near East and even from India. Beliefs of the Jews were affected by their sojourns in Egypt and Babylon, and these, in turn, affected Greece, Rome and eventually northern Europe. The Romans brought to northern Europe influences harking back to the valley of the Euphrates and the Nile."

"When Herbert Spencer and others began the study of cultures they discovered that we had many vestiges of the customs of more primitive peoples all over the world."

"Herbert Spencer and his contemporaries tried to build up theories about the vestiges of common primitive customs. In scientific work we do not now try to build up theory, but rather endeavor to know a whole culture, trace it far back in time and its spread over the earth. When we trace back the history of Europe through the ages we are able to show conclusively how culture developed, and trace its origins to the culture of Egypt and the Euphrates and the Persian highlands."

Changed Mind

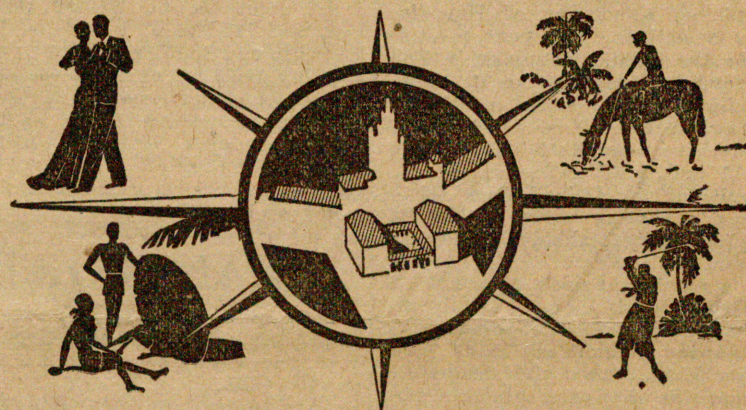

Grandmother asked little Martha whether she wished Santa to bring her a large or small talkie doll for Christmas.

Martha expressed herself very excitedly:

"I don't want any doll that can talk."

"I thought you liked a doll that could talk," said grandmother.

"I have changed my mind," was the reply. "I'm afraid it would talk like grandpa and he said some very bad words this morning."

OBITUARY

Mr. Philip Ebeling, son of Robert and Mary Ebeling departed this life last Thursday, January 11th at 5:40 A. M., at the age of 50 years, 10 months and 2 days.

He was born in Orland township on March 9th, 1883 and received the sacrament of holy baptism in Trinity Church of Bachelor's Grove. Later his parents resided in Chicago for about eleven years where their son was duly instructed in the chief parts of Christian doctrine and confirmed. At the age of twenty years he and his parents moved back to Orland on their farm.

On January 1st, 1910 he entered into the state of holy matrimony with Miss Lucy Storz. This union was blessed with five children, one of whom, little daughter Ruth, preceded her father into eternity at the age of three months.

Mr. Ebeling's death did not come unexpected. He was ailing for some time but always was able to be up and around. On the evening of January 7th, however, he suffered a stroke and remained unconscious until the good Lord graciously relieved him by a blessed death on Thursday morning.

He is survived by his devoted wife, their sons Robert, Victor, and Philip, Jr., and their daughter, Margaret; his aged mother, Mrs. Mary Ebeling; his father-in-law, Henry Storz; his two sisters, Mrs. Charles Storz, and Mrs. Charles Breitbarth, and many other relatives and friends. The funeral services took place on Sunday afternoon, January 14th. The pastor, the Rev. A. Lach, officiated and based his remarks on the comforting words of Jer. 29, 11. It was impossible for the church to seat all the people that had gathered for this funeral to pay their last tribute to the deceased. Burial was made in the Orland Lutheran Cemetery.

"For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." —Phil. 1, 21.

CARD OF THANKS

EBELING—Philip. The family sincerely thank the relatives and friends for the kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received at the loss of their beloved husband and father. They also thank Rev. A. Lach for his comforting words and all those who so kindly donated the use of their cars.

MRS. LOUISE EEBLING AND FAMILY.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Mrs. Volly Dreher and Miss Emily Schiller were guests of their brother A. Schiller over the week end.

SYMPATHY: The Comrades of William Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W. of the U. S. extend their profound and sincere sympathy to their Comrades William and Joseph Heyden in the recent bereavement in the loss of their mother.

All comrades of William Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W. of the U. S. are enjoined to attend the regular monthly meeting of the Post. Their co-operation and presence are necessary for the welfare of the Post. By your attendance you will help to create a feeling of true comradeship with a revival of good times recalled as a soldier.

Union Pacific Issues

Commemorative

"Lucky Pieces"

To commemorate the completion of the new high-speed, light-weight, streamlined Union Pacific passenger train, the Union Pacific "lucky piece" has been designed. The first of these to be made are being sent to American editors. The editor of the News-Bulletin received one of these souvenirs the past week. These lucky pieces are made of aluminum alloy, the same material of which the new Union Pacific train is built—as strong as steel of the same dimensions but of only one-third the weight.

The Union Pacific is deeply appreciative of the interest which has been shown by publishers, editors and writers in the development and construction of this train. Its completion in January marks an epoch in transportation history. The progress of the experiments which are to be carried on will be followed with keen interest by railroad executives all over the world.

A total of one million of these lucky pieces have been made. These will be given to school children and to visitors to the train on its exhibition tour. It took five tons, 10,000 pounds of aluminum alloy to make the million lucky pieces.

THE VETERANS AND NATIONAL RECOVERY

Public interest in the United States today is centered on the immediate prospects for financial, industrial and employment recovery. Our return to a normal prosperity is a goal towards which our government officials are bending their efforts. The veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States believes that the present status of veteran welfare in the United States is one of the most important aspects of this national question, and that our organization can offer a solution for at least a part of the problem of national recovery.

Two of the major legislative objectives of our organization at this time are the repeal of the so-called Economy Act of March 20, 1933 and the immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates. Consider, for a moment the economic phases involved in these two questions.

Repeal of the Economy Act would restore to veterans of all wars, and to their dependants the sum of four hundred million dollars a year taken from them by that vicious piece of legislation. That four hundred million dollars, in most instances, supplied the necessities of life to approximately 600,000 veterans and the dependent members of their families. It was used to pay rent and doctors bills; it bought groceries, paid taxes, went into the tills of clothing merchants and other retailers. It made, and kept, those veterans financially secure and independent of the public charity rolls of their respective communities. Cutting veterans compensations by four hundred million dollars a year meant that four hundred millions of dollars a year was removed from its normal channels in industry and commerce and that the responsibility for the existence of many thousands of disabled and needy veterans was placed on individual and already over-burdened communities and organized charities.

Similarly, the economic phases involved in the question of immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates, affect, not only the veteran himself, but business men, business conditions and every other commercial activity throughout the country. Two billion, five hundred million dollars is owed to the veteran as a debt which was acknowledged by Congress in 1925, an obligation that will remain unpaid until 1945 unless Congress is persuaded to act before that date.

Present business conditions are due, economic experts agree, to a lack of purchasing power in the hands of the masses. These experts also agree that the ultimate success of the National Recovery Act depends upon the purchasing power of those who are in need of necessities and in the mood to buy. Industry refuses and must continue to refuse to borrow funds to promote its business when the demand for commodities is lacking. This demand will continue to be absent until additional money somehow is placed in immediate circulation.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States proposes a plan which will go far towards remedying these conditions. Approximately three and one-half million World War veterans, representing twelve million consumers, have in their hands at this moment, the adjusted service certificates given them in 1925. By paying without further delay the balance due on these certificates the federal government can place two billion, five hundred million dollars in cold hard cash in the hands of individuals who will immediately turn this money into the normal courses of business activity.

The payment of adjusted service certificates would be felt immediately by the entire country. This process of stimulating trade and industry would require no high salaried commissions and no new machinery that merely creates thousands of political jobs. The expenditure of this money would be absolutely devoid of the taint of pork barrel legislation.

Unlike the money being spent for public works, the payment of the so-called bonus would be building no tax burden for future generations to struggle with during the years to come without end. Our plan is simple, straightforward and without complications. It requires no "brain trust" to determine its effects and no college professors to predict its results. Each one knows that thousands of dollars suddenly brought into this community from outside sources is certain to have an immediate and beneficial effect upon the community as a whole.

The solution offered by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States - repeal of the Economy Act and immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates - is a sound and practical method of increasing the circulation of money. It is one plan that will hasten the success of the National Recovery Act, towards which goal the efforts of the entire country are now being directed.

Joliet Symphony Orchestra Will Hold Concert

The Joliet Symphony Orchestra will give a concert on Sunday afternoon January 28th, 3 o'clock in the High School Auditorium. Owen McBride, young Joliet baritone will be featured as soloist.

The Orchestra Committee is asking all civic organizations to lend their support by keeping this date open and also by selling their members 100%.

After all, this is purely a civic project. The professional musicians including Ralph Cissne, the young conductor, have given their services whole heartedly in order to keep the orchestra during these months of depression. We must keep our orchestra for it serves a real civic need in our community. Our young High School musicians when they leave the High School band and orchestra find a real opportunity to develop their talent in the weekly rehearsals and concerts of the Symphony Orchestra. Their contact with professional musicians with years of experience is invaluable to them. Their taste for the best in music is cultivated for there they are introduced to works of the masters only.

The aim of the orchestra also is to give Young Artists the opportunity of an orchestral appearance which means so much to a young professional, an opportunity which is rare and very difficult to obtain.

If our Symphony Orchestra accomplishes only these two things, namely: Cultivates the taste for better and finer music in our young musicians, or helps some young professional musician to attain his goal of success, isn't it worth supporting? Isn't it a permanent asset to the community?

By community we mean not only Joliet Proper, but Lockport, Plainfield, Morris in fact all the surrounding communities. At present we have a Cellist from Plainfield, a Violinist from Morris, a Viola player from Dwight, and a Violinist who formerly lived in Lockport. We Welcome Talent from your City.

In helping to make possible this concert you will also help yourself to enjoy an afternoon of Better Music.

Chauncey Reed Coming For Cong.

Chauncey W. Reed, state's attorney of DuPage County has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congressman in the 11th Congressional District of Illinois.

Mr. Reed is chairman of the Republican Central Committee of DuPage County, a position he has held since 1926 and is now serving his fourth consecutive term as state's attorney.

How to Eat for Health and Beauty

"Hollywood stars have learned to control their weight safely by building their diets around fresh milk," says Sally Eilers, Fox star.

IN ANY discussion of reducing the word "calories" is frequently mentioned. A calorie is a unit of heat which is given off when the body uses up energy. Foods yield calories in varying amounts. Those rich in fats, starch and sugar yield many calories. Naturally, a comparatively low calorie food such as fresh milk, should be the basis of the reducing diet, because it is, conveniently, not only low in calories, but rich in food value, being the most complete of any single food in all the elements needed for health.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS - ELECTRICITY BILL COMPLAINTS

Ratio of Bills Rendered to Complaints Received

11-Month Period - January 1 to December 1, 1933.

Note: Complaints include all specific complaints registered with the Company which concerned consumption, increase in total bill or rate.
Complaints about rates form only a small proportion of total
All figures used taken from Company records.

Of the total number of electric bills rendered by the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois during the first eleven months of 1933, only six tenths of one per cent brought complaints, according to Howard T. East testifying before the Illinois Commerce Commission recently. Mr. East is in charge of the company's service department. He was qualified by the company's attorney as a national authority on service matters.

Asked if bill complaints rise or fall with rate changes, Mr. East said that rate reductions do not cause a decrease in the number of complaints received. Variations in complaints are caused by other factors, the principle one being the economic situation.

Describing the effects of the depression on the number of complaints received, Mr. East said that as the average customer's financial situation grew worse the number of complaints increased. Utility companies throughout the country have had the same experience.

When asked the principal causes of bill complaints, he enumerated these causes: "Increases in use due to season, increased use on account of new refrigerators or other appliances, illness in the family, entertaining, more persons in the household, bills covering period larger than normal, response to agitation against the company and difficulty in paying bills.

Mr. East's testimony also revealed that the quality of electric service in 250 communities served by the company is graded at 94.39 per cent by the inspectors of the Illinois Commerce Commission in their recent survey reported at the beginning of 1933. This is higher than the average grade for the entire state according to the Commission reports. Ten of the 17 highest ranking cities in Class "A" are served by the Public Service Company.

COTTON FLUFFS

MUCH space has been devoted to sermons on sanitary measures. In better bred families one finds individual wash cloths, combs and brushes. But a rather light-hearted attitude persists with respect to the powder puff. Seldom does it get its due share of cleansing and scrubbing. And a soiled, greasy-surfaced powder puff can do more damage in a day than facial preparations can remove in a week. Take blackheads, for instance—the bane in the complexion and life of thousands of women. Many are the causes of blackheads. And not the least of these is the soiled powder puff continually grinding powder into the oily, shiny surface. Cotton fluffs make excellent powder puffs. They are very inexpensive, obviate the necessity of washing and disinfecting, and are of course more sanitary.

The other day I visited the home of an acquaintance and was delighted to see two small baskets filled with "individual powder puffs," as she calls them. She trimmed the baskets herself—purchased them very inexpensively; similar to small sewing baskets they are. She lined them with blotting paper saturated with her favorite perfume. Over that she used cotton padding and stitched pale green satin over all. Over the satin she always has a cellophane or tissue paper lining, which can be changed as frequently as she pleases. This keeps the satin from becoming dusty and soiled and also keeps the puffs free from dust.

The puffs are made from small squares of cotton. The four corners are gathered together, twirled to make a small handle, tied with a wee bit of gay colored ribbon if you wish—and there you are.

These puffs may be bought ready-made in drug and department stores, or you can make them yourself. The lovely lady of my story keeps a few in her purse at all times. She never uses a puff more than once—then immediately discards. And she always has a supply on hand for emergency purposes and for the proverbial friend who makes a habit of "may I use your powder puff?"

Safer and infinitely more sanitary, these little guest baskets of "individuals" can also add a note of gaiety and prestige to your dressing table. Try it.

If your skin is very delicate and sensitive, before using any bleaching preparation on your face, take this test. Apply the bleach you intend using to your arm, above the elbow. Do this at night before retiring. In the morning, if the skin shows no irritation you may feel confident that it can be used on the face—safely. If the skin does show irritation a milder bleach will be necessary.

BUDGET FOR BEAUTY

IT IS not necessarily the woman who has enough time and money to experiment with every new-fangled novelty that achieves the utmost in personal loveliness. No more than the woman who clutters her home with a great many knickknacks, or her person with furs and jewels.

We all know at least one wise woman who, gifted with a discriminating sense of values, has achieved a charming home and an adequate and becoming wardrobe. We all know many women whose incomes have been cut in the past few years, but whose sense of proportions has increased. And essentials have not suffered thereby. Therein lies the secret of successful budgeting of time or finances.

Assemble your cosmetic wardrobe as you do your wearing apparel. Be systematic and sensible about it. Experiments are often costly. Therefore decide first just what it is you really need, thereby eliminating any unnecessary waste. Learn also the best methods for the use of your essentials, thereby insuring the best results in the shortest possible period.

Now apportion your budget. You cannot afford any novelties? Fine. Start with the essentials. Can you have just one, two or three items? Then choose the ones that will work best for you. The most important step in any treatment is proper cleansing, therefore every woman should have the logical cleansing medium for her complexion. What next? For the dry skin a nourishing skin food, for the oily skin an astringent, for the blemished skin a healing preparation, and so on.

The wise woman will start with, let us say, a coat, get a hat to harmonize and then build around this foundation—dress, shoes, gloves, bag. Likewise with the cosmetic wardrobe. Build on the essentials. Every feminine heart delights in having the non-essentials, too, but these can be filled in as her budget permits. It is very encouraging to know that many women accomplish a lot on comparatively little. By that I do not mean that the finer beauty preparations can be had for the asking or for the proverbial song. But too many women spend too much on foolish fill-ins. Weeding out non-essentials and planning one's cosmetic wardrobe systematically and sensibly, one can succeed in getting the best at a saving.

Proteins of Immense Value

Their High Importance in Daily Diet Is a Matter Which Under No Circumstances Must Be Overlooked in the Planning of Menus.

"What's become of proteins?" I heard a man say the other day. "It seems to me I never hear them mentioned any more or see them in print since vitamins have become so popular." Perhaps we have neglected talking about protein recently, but it is still just as important a part of the menu as it ever was.

It doesn't seem as necessary for us to stress this importance because most of us who have enough to spend for food are quite likely to get plenty of it in the daily diet, of which it is a most important part, because we depend upon protein to repair the daily wear and tear on the tissues, which go on continually. Children who are building new tissue must have a larger proportion of protein in their food than the grown-ups need. This extra supply is usually, as it should be, in the form of milk. When adults drink milk they take it not so much on this account, but because of its contributions of minerals and vitamins.

Meats, fish, eggs and cheese, besides milk, are the animal foods which provide us with protein. Among the vegetable foods we find the largest contributors are nuts, dried beans, peas and lentils. Breads and cereals give us a worthwhile portion of protein, but most other vegetable foods are lacking. We have changed and rechanged our attitude toward the amount of protein necessary and advisable for diets. It used to be thought it was necessary, to provide energy, and this quality was described by the general adjective "strengthening"—whatever that means.

After serious nutrition research work began, it was found that starches, sugars and fats furnished energy, and just as satisfactorily and more efficiently. Also that after the body had used what protein it needed to repair the tissues it was able to burn the rest as fuel for energy. The American nutritionists felt that a smaller proportion of protein was essential than did the German workers. Then came the theory that it was unwise to take more than 10 per cent of the calories in a day in the form of protein.

Recent research work, such as that undertaken by the Explorer Steffenen, when he lived for a year on a diet of meat, which, of course, furnished protein and fat, has seemed to show only that the larger amount is not harmful. We, however, recommend that the proportion of protein be kept moderate, as much for economic reasons as in the interests of health. Protein foods are more expensive than the so-called "energy" foods. The normal diet is so much more interesting and attractive when it is "balanced" with protein, fat and carbohydrates.

Just a word about the comparative value of vegetable and animal proteins. The latter are more efficient and while it is possible to get what we need from vegetables, our diet is too bulky unless milk is excepted from the class of animal proteins.

Well, Just What Could Unfortunate Man Say?

The proud possession of a young South side boy is a pup tent, but, at the age of nine, he is of an adventurous spirit and does not always desire to stay in his own back yard. Accordingly there have been occasions when he has transplanted the pup tent to the yard of the next door neighbors who have complained to the boy's parents about it.

The boy's father saw their side of the matter and warned young son never again to pitch his pup tent next door. Son promised to obey the injunction, so imagine father's dismay the other night when he looked next door and saw the familiar khaki in the neighbor's lot.

Angrily he strode to the fence and shouted:

"Get up and come out of there, before I give you a good spanking!" Imagine his further dismay when the neighbor's wife, dressed in an old pair of khaki knickers, arose from her knees and confronted him.

He turned every color of the rainbow over the incident and still does whenever it is mentioned. He still is wondering how he might have apologized to the neighbor without telling her she looked like a pup tent.

—Kansas City Star.

So-called vegetarians usually admit milk, eggs and sometimes cheese to a place on the menu.

Pecan Pudding.

1 cup soft bread crumbs
2 cups scalded milk
1 tablespoon shortening
1 cup pecans (cut)
1 cup chopped seeded raisins or dates

1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs yolks
3/4 cup sugar
1 lemon, juice, and grated rind
2 stiffly beaten egg whites

Mix bread crumbs, milk shortening, nuts, salt, egg yolks, sugar, juice and rind of lemon. When well blended, add raisins or dates. Mix thoroughly; then fold in whites of eggs. Pour into buttered individual molds and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F., twenty to thirty minutes. Serve hot with cream.

Crab Bisque.

3/4 cup canned crab
1 pint milk
1 slice onion
3 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
Pepper
Nutmeg

Rub crab meat through sieve. Scald milk with onion. Add crab meat, butter and flour rubbed together. Add seasoning.

Oven Croquettes.

1 pound chopped meat
1 small onion, minced
Salt and pepper
2 eggs
1 cup flake crackers
1 cup tomato sauce
2 tablespoons fat

To meat add onion, salt, pepper and beaten eggs. Crumble crackers and mix with meat mixture. Shape in cone-shaped croquettes. Put a portion of fat on top of each. Place on greased baking dish. Bake, covered in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., for twenty minutes. Uncover and brown. Serve garnished with a sprig of parsley in the top of each and surround with hot tomato sauce.

Airplanes and Elephants

Annoyance at the noise of airplane motors that have recently invaded their territory is given as one of the reasons for the noticeable unrest among African elephant herds of late by Capt. R. J. D. Salmon, says the Detroit News. Even trained animals in the Belgian Congo never become really indifferent to the sound of gasoline engines, he states, and he believes it unlikely that the herds in the Uganda will ever learn to browse peacefully as the airmail goes overhead.

The most significant result of the unrest now apparent among the African wild elephant herds is that many of the animals are leaving their familiar haunts along the east Nile to seek new feeding grounds to the north and south of this area.

Blue Ribbons of Honor for Prize Young Citizens

Prize pups, hogs and hens; prize corn, carrots, cabbages and chrysanthemums—and then some one slapped his thigh as an idea struck him: Why not prize young citizens? A blue-ribbon pup for a blue-ribbon boy, as it were. Or a blue-ribbon chrysanthemum on a blue-ribbon girl. It seems rather out of order, in this day of splendid hogs, that there are so many children, who, like little, black Topsy, "just growed."

And then the reformers and thinkers man the societies—how many are there?—to inquire into the causes of juvenile delinquency and the crowded condition of the reform schools, jails and other institutions of higher learning. Which is not saying, of course, that these societies are not needed and that many of them are not beginning at the beginning—catching the child while he is still young and tender and training his complexes before they get out of hand.

To get on with the story, in Omaha, the World-Herald and the American Legion sponsored a young citizens' contest. From thirteen districts into which the state was divided, 26 girls and 26 boys were entered and subjected to grueling intelligence, personality, mental alertness and physical tests. Then medals were to be awarded, five to each sex.

It was all very exciting. In the personality test 77 questions were put to the youthful contestants. Here are some of them: Would you say that you are cynical about members of the opposite sex generally? Can you stand pain quietly? Have you ever been afraid that you might jump off when you were on a high place? Is there a conflict in your nature between sex and morality?

The intelligence tests were from questions used by the United States army in similar examinations, which, by the way, resulted in mass flunking. The answers had to be put down rapidly, before time was called. Here are some: If you find a man who has hanged himself, you should (state what). Five p. m. is a rush hour on street cars because (state why). If it takes seven men two days to dig a 140-foot drain, how many men are needed to dig it in half a day?

The mental alertness test consisted of a maze of catch questions, each to be answered in six minutes. Try this one on Johnny: The numerals from 1 to 9 are in a row. If 7 is more than 5, then cross out the number 6 unless 6 is more than 8, in which case draw a line under the number 7.

This is not silly, said Dr. Charles Fordyce, of the University of Nebraska, who helped with the tests. Answer the questions in the allotted time, and the result will show how smart one is.

The prize winners represent a cross-section of America: Angela Peatrowsky, Leola Westover, Joyce Liebenborfer, Maxine Federle, Marie Kotouc, Robert McFarland, Gerald Gillan, Charles Haynes, Harold Grovert, and Chester McDonald.—Literary Digest.

Code for Poets

The Poet Laureate League of America is said to have asked that the NRA establish a code for them. A maximum working week of 35 hours and a minimum wage of $100 is suggested. There is no indication of who pays.

The Philadelphia Inquirer seems to take the matter gravely, for it observes: "We do not think a code for poets would be practical. There is something mechanical about it. Poets have so many different methods of composing that it would be hopeless to stretch them all upon one crustacean bid."—Literary Digest.

If you want to GET RID of Constipation worries— Science says Today use a LIQUID Laxative

1. Control intestinal action exactly—no "purging"
2. Measure to suit your individual needs to the drop
3. Banish Bowel Fatigue and the laxative habit

Here's Why:

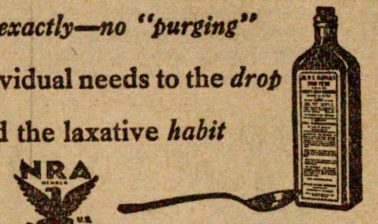

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and in some cases even affect the liver and kidneys.

A doctor will tell you that the unwise choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation. Fortunately, the public is fast returning to the use of laxatives in liquid form.

A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to take "a double dose" a day or two later.

In buying any laxative, always read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains one doubtful drug, don't take it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescriptional preparation in which there are no mineral drugs. Its ingredients are on the label. By using it, you avoid danger of bowel strain. You can keep the bowels regular, and comfortable; you can make constipated spells as rare as colds.

The liquid test:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels", but strong cathartics:

First. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose you find is suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without any need of stimulation.

Syrup pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used. It contains senna, a natural laxative which is perfectly safe for the youngest child. Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

It's All Comparative

You can guess a man's age by observing whether he says "a young man of forty" or "an old guy of forty."

Reminder

Note to parents: You were that same kind of idiot at sixteen and look how well you turned out.—Los Angeles Times.

Here's Quickest, Simplest Way to Stop a Cold

1. Take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.
2. Drink full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.
3. If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of water and gargle according to directions in box.

Almost Instant Relief

in this Way

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICK-EST, safest, surest way to treat a cold. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Orland Beautified By Park Projects

CWA workers are doing some very good work at Orland Park by way of building local park sites. One site is on the east side of the Wabash subway and the other is on the east side of the Wabash depot. Stones and fine stone for the walls, steps and paths are being furnished by Supt. Ecuers of the Cook County Forest Preserve. The Orland Park Woman's Club will beautify these local park sites with trees, shrubs and flowers, so Orland Park will have some beauty spots next summer.
